I. Overview:

This course is designed to introduce students to democracy and human rights in Asia through comparative analysis. We begin by examining definitions of democracy and a broad overview of democracy in Asia. Building on this foundation, we examine a variety of components of democratic governance, elections and citizenship. We will then move to an in-depth study of human rights, focusing on civil liberties, political, social, economic rights, the rights of specific communities – children, women, homosexuals and indigenous communities – and contemporary challenges facing human rights and human rights advocacy. Throughout we compare the experiences in different countries in the region, from Vietnam and China to India and Indonesia. The course draws from experiences throughout Asia and aims to provide both insight into the challenges of democratization Asia as well as a broader understanding of democracy and human rights.

This course does not presume any background in Asia, democratization or human rights, although background in one of these areas is recommended. The course is limited to eighteen students to facilitate effective discussion of the issues and sharing of advocacy reports.

II. Course Texts/Materials There are two sets of readings in this course, required and recommended. Students will be expected to read all the required reading. Students are encouraged to read the recommended reading for a deeper understanding of issues, but will not be tested on this material in the course. All the required course reading is either in the required texts or on reserve (as hard copies) in the SAIS Library. All material on reserve is listed by title. The recommended reading should be available in the Library stacks. Additional optional reading material is available on the course website.

III. Course Requirements

a) Class Attendance & Participation (10% of total grade) Students are expected to read all the required reading before class to participate in discussion. Please note that more than two class absences will significantly lower a student's final grade and a number of classes will have a long session of an additional half an hour. These longer classes are marked with an “*”.

b) Democracy Brief (20% of total grade) (4-6 pages) Students are asked to write a personal assessment of the quality of democracy in a country in Asia. This brief is due Friday, February 27th via email by midnight.

c) Book Review/Film Review (10% of total grade) (3-5 pages) Students are asked to review a film/book in the class that addresses democratic freedom and human rights. This assignment is due Friday, March 13th via email by midnight.

d) Policy Advocacy Presentation (10% of total grade): Students are asked to make a brief (no longer than 10 minutes) presentation of their policy advocate report and answer questions from students for 10 minutes. Student reports will be circulated for peer review. Please note that the class presentations will be conducted over two or three sessions depending on the size of the class. Presentations are scheduled for Friday, April 17th.

e) Policy Advocacy Report (45% of total grade): Students are asked to write a 10-12 page policy advocacy report, that reviews the contemporary human rights challenges of a specific country in Asia. Students are asked to analyze the scope of problems and government policy, propose solutions to resolve this problem and should consult with the professor on the top before the middle of March. Reports will be discussed in class and copies will be made available one day before class on the course website. Advocacy reports will be graded on the substance of the paper, the research thoroughness, viability of the recommendations and the accessibility and persuasive presentation of the material. Students must email a copy on their draft versions to the professor. Students will submit three drafts of the report, with the final one graded. The first draft of the report is due April 1st, the second April 16th and the final paper April 30th.

f) Policy Advocacy Report Feedback (5% of total grade): Students are asked to provide written and/or oral feedback on their fellow student's contribution. This feedback must be provided during or immediately after (within one day) the contribution presentations and must be submitted via the professor for review. Feedback sheets are due Monday, April 20th
